FLOOD WATERS CRIPPLED HIGHWAYS

Fire Truck The Burning Issue In Orland Park

The residents of Orland Park are all agog over the big row between the Village Board and the Orland Fire Chief John Helenhouse, relative to the ownership of the Orland Park fire truck. Trouble has been brewing for quite some time.

The Village Board, through their attorney have repeatedly sent letters to Mr. Helenhouse demanding that he turn over the title to the truck and the truck and its equipment to the Village board, which Mr. Helenhouse has refused to do.

The controversy was climaxed last Saturday morning when Mayor Walter R. Schussler Jr. of Orland Park, filed suit in the Circuit Court of Cook County in Chicago for the possession of the fire truck.

Mr. Helenhouse had been anticipating this move for some time. He has engaged attorney Otto Wolger- ecki of Blue Island to represent him. Immediately after the suit had been filed representatives of the Chicago Tribune called on Mr. Helenhouse for the story of this controversy and a very interesting story and pictures appeared in the Sunday Tribune.

Mr. Helenhouse states that he has been fire chief for 11 years and during his tenure of office has built up the fire department to its present standard of efficiency. The first fire truck was purchased thru donations from farmers and other citizens of the community and gave excellent service until within the last few years when it was deemed necessary to purchase a new truck to furnish more adequate fire protection. Mr. Helenhouse had asked the village board to purchase the new truck, but declares they refused to do so saying that if he could raise the money the fire department should buy a truck.

Thereupon Mr. Helenhouse got busy and enlisted the aid of the farmers of the community who contributed $50 apiece for the purchase of the new fire truck and in return were given an agreement they would be given adequate fire protection for a certain term of years. The new equipment cost approximately $4500 of which a very substantial sum has been paid. In addition to donations, the fire department sponsored a picnic, parade, dance and raised a considerable sum of money which was applied to the purchase of the new truck. Mr. Helenhouse at the time he was fire chief sold the old truck to a volunteer fire department in Joliet for $900. This sum was turned over to the village board and they in turn sent the $900 to the Darling Manufacturing company in Chicago who manufactured the new fire truck.

The beginning of the fire works between the board and the fire chief had its inception when a request was made that the fire truck be used to fill a water storage tank at the local dairy and also to sprinkle the dusty ball diamond, according to Fire Chief Helenhouse, who says that he is not through fighting the case and maintains that the village did not purchase the truck through a bond issue or direct taxation and therefore has no claim on the equipment, the title of which is in the name of the Orland Park Volunteer fire department and not in the name of Mr. Helenhouse.

Monday afternoon a deputy from the Cook County Sheriff's office called on Mr. Helenhouse with a notice that the fire truck was being impounded by the Village board. Immediately thereafter the former fire chief counseled his attorney and prepared for further action. On Monday night at the regular meeting of the village board, Mr. Helenhouse was relieved of his office as fire chief and Geo. Steinhagen and Adolph Zerbs were appointed as temporary Fire Chiefs.

Mr. Helenhouse has operated a barber shop in Orland for the past 35 years and has been fire chief for 11 years and is now serving his second four year term as constable.

He has been very progressive and through his efforts much has been accomplished in giving Orland Park a modern up to date fire department.

Mayor Schussler concedes Mr. Helenhouse has been a very good fire chief but insists that the village is demanding adequate fire protection and that due to the differences between the Village Council and the Fire Chief, the village authorities feel that some definite action must be taken to assure the protection demanded. The outcome of the squabble is being watched with keen interest by the entire territory.

ORLAND PARK COUNCIL APPOINTS TWO TEMPORARY FIRE CHIEFS

At the meeting of the Orland Park Village council Monday evening, it approved the appointment of Geo. Steinhagen and Adolph Zerbs as temporary fire chiefs until the volunteer fire department can get their choice to the village board in the proper way.

Mr. Steinhagen assured the board that he had been given a promise of all necessary help in case of a fire and gave the following telephone numbers to call in case of fire.

During the day call Orland 289 or 81, at night call Orland 111 or 56M.

Mr. Zerbs and Mr. Steinhagen plan to hold a meeting within a few days and will be glad to clear up any point in question on procedure. Both have assured the village board that the fire truck and equipment now in their possession will be given the best possible care and attention.

HE SAVED OUR UNION

BACK, when George Washington was still a tobacco planter he had an idea about Democracy—an idea so simple they said it couldn't work. "Imagine letting people govern themselves. Outrageous. Fantastic." But 166 years after Washington's "fantastic" idea was adopted as the Declaration of Independence, it is still working and the envy of all the world.

But if there had not been another man, Abe Lincoln by name, Washington's great idea might not have survived. Lincoln believed so firmly in government of the people that not even a divided nation could break his faith in Democracy. This FAITH, that Lincoln had, was great enough to re-unite the nation and to give deeper meaning to Washington's idea.

The latter came to her assistance and about the same time Miss Betty Schoen and Joyce Schoeneck happened along. Mr. O'Rourke asked them to stay with Mrs. Koehler while he went to the home of Geo. Heisner and secured a car.

Frankfort Firemen Use Boat to Rescue Marooned Residents

During the flood situation last Friday afternoon, the Frankfort volunteer fire department received a call from Lincoln Estates that several dwellings on what is known as River Road in the vicinity of Hickory Creek were surrounded by water which was rising and that the occupants were cut off from escape from the flooded homes.

Fire chief Henry Luhring and Mayor Geo. Sangmeister quickly decided how to effect the rescue of the marooned residents. It was definitely out to try to run the fire truck into the flooded area and at first it was thought a raft might be built of grain doors, but this idea was given up and it was thought if a boat could be located it would prove more efficient.

Burton Breidert member of the fire department happened to have a fishing boat stored away at his place. The boat was promptly loaded on the fire truck and taken out to the flooded area. Fire Chief Luhring and Mr. Breidert rowed the boat to the marooned homes but by that time the water had stoped rising and the people decided not to be rescued but to stay in their own homes.

New Lenox Lumber Yard Has $1000 Damage

The heavy downpour of rain last Friday turned fields and highways into rivers and lakes and flooded many basements. The Lincoln Highway east of New Lenox was badly flooded near the Spencer Rd. and the Wabash subway and was impassable. West of New Lenox the highway was flooded and the Rock Island subway was made impassable and could not be used.

Cedar Road in New Lenox was shut off when Hickory Creek over flowed its banks and the water ran over the highway north of the bridge to a depth of over two feet.

The New Lenox Lumber and Hardware Co., premises were badly flooded. The office floor was under three inches of water. Office records were removed. The company suffered considerable damage as a result of a cement supply being under water and setting. Lumber and other materials were damaged.

The New Lenox Lumber and Hardware Co., estimate their loss at about $1,000.00.

A number of small homes along the banks of Hickory Creek in the Brookwood subdivision were inundated and the occupants had no time to remove their belongings.

The Lincoln Estates east of Frankfort on Lincoln highway reported many flooded areas, especially south of the Lincoln Highway. Houses were under water and one automobile caught on a highway by the quickly rising water was marooned in the flood, the water running into the body of the car up to the seats.

The Keefe and Shafer homes were badly flooded. There were other instances of damage by high water.

The Lincoln Highway at Matteson had to be closed to traffic when the flood waters reached a depth of 8 feet under the Illinois Central bridge over the Highway.

Wolf Road also came in for its share of the flood. North of Mokena near the Chas. Liess place the Wolf Road and the Southwest Highway were flooded so badly that traffic had to be suspended. A few cars were marooned in the flood and a tow truck in trying to pull out the stalled car, also became stalled.

At the Liess place the water was right up to the doors but did not run into the rooms.

Kean Avenue was also closed to traffic in spots. Northeast of Mokena the road was impassable due to the flooding of the Rock Island subway. The highway was closed to traffic south of Frankfort where the Michigan Central and E&E railroad subways were flooded, also low spots along the highway.

South of Mokena Hickory Creek went on a rampage and the flood waters drove the Rogers family from their home located right on the south bank of the creek.

Many basements in Mokena were flooded due to ice bound ditches and frozen tiles. The water could not soak into the ground and came so fast it had no chance to run off with out causing floods. In the Herman Lorenz basement there was 26 inches of water, putting the fire out in the furnace. A power pump was brought into action. The pump had a capacity of 3600 gallons an hour and it took over three hours to pump the water out of the basement.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz extend their sincerest appreciation and thanks to Elmer Coor, George Bennett, N. F. Heiman and Mr. Biedfeld for their kindness and service spending several hours in pumping the water out of the flooded basement.

The Dath and Henry Braun homes on Wolf Road also had flooded basements which had to be pumped out. The basements in the Albert Braun and Harry F. Mall homes were flooded so badly that the furnace fires were put out. There were many other incidents of flooded basements.

Carl Wolters of Mokena had quite an experience while trying to drive home from work. He was on a gravel road at Crestwood. The road was under water and his car became stalled. When he opened the car door and tried to step on the running board, the water was over his shoe tops. The Mayor of Crestwood wearing hipboots happened to be on hand seeing Mr. Wolters' predicament, waded over to the car and carried Mr. Wolters on his shoulders to high ground.

During the flood a six year old child coming home from school fell in a six foot hole in Midlothian and was drowned.

IT'S FRIDAY THE 13th TODAY
It's the old superstition date of Friday the 13th today is look out for black cats, don't walk under ladders, etc.

Malta, at Mediterranean 'Crossroad,' Still Remains Target for Nazi Bombs

Even though the United States army and navy fighting forces have been battling far to the other side of the world, and thereby shadowing the importance which Malta (see arrow above) has in its pivotal point in the Mediterranean, this regularly bombed spot is, like Singapore and Gibraltar (other very important British "life line links"), constantly on "alert" orders. This map also shows how almost all important sea-borne north and south and east and west sea traffic is within striking distance from this island. On the left edge of the map is shown Gibraltar. South of Malta, in North Africa Libya, is the territory where the Nazi and British have been thrusting and counter-thrusting.

Forming One of the World's Smallest Island Groups,
About 150 Miles Southwest of Italy's 'Toe'
And Attacked Over 200 Times.

Despite the continual pounding by the Nazi air force during the past six months, Malta still remains to fight back as one of Britain's important naval bases.

This "hot spot" of the Mediterranean ocean, lying athwart the criss-crossing sea lanes between Gibraltar and Suez, Europe and Africa, has been called the most bombed spot on earth.

News of United States' army and navy forces fighting on the other side of the world from Malta have dwarfed in significance the daily reports of bombing raids at this Mediterranean base. Military authorities, though, seem to think that Hitler will marshal all his military might for a "knock-out" blow here.

The Malta islands form one of the world's smallest island groups. Made up of three islands, an islet, and a rock, it covers a total area of only about 122 square miles. The "title" island of Malta itself, whose "Grand Harbor" of Valletta is big enough to accommodate the entire British fleet, is less than 100 square miles in extent.

Geography Makes History.
Yet these Mediterranean stepping stones have figured in history and legend since before the Apostle Paul was shipwrecked on their shores. The Maltese say that Ulysses came this way. Ancient sea-going Phoenicians founded on Malta's deeply indented coasts useful ports from which to base their trade and exploration activities in the western Mediterranean. The Carthaginians moved in six centuries before Christ, followed by the conquering Romans. Greeks, Saracens, Normans, and Spaniards all had a hand in the rule of the strategic Mediterranean islands and left a share in its mixed heritage of blood and culture.

It was under the Maltese Cross of the reigning Knights of St. John, however, that Malta saw its most colorful and romantic period. For nearly 300 years this Crusading Order upheld its rich and feudal aristocracy of castle, church, and fortress. In the famous battle against the Turks in 1565, the besieged Knights, with 10,000 followers, turned back some 50,000 would-be invaders.

On Napoleon's Path.
Napoleon was one of the conquerors of Malta. On his way to Egypt in 1798, he took the islands from the declining Knights as an easy prize. Soon afterward, following an uprising against the French which was assisted by the British fleet, they were annexed by Great Britain, and finally were awarded that country in 1814 by the congress of Vienna.

During World War I, Malta again became an important place name in international annals. It was not only a leading base of Allied military operations but also a hospital and recuperation center.

The entry of Italy into the present war saw the island among the first enemy objectives. In six months the Maltese capital of Valletta suffered more than 200 air raids. It is only 58 miles south of Sicily, according to the National Geographic society.

Gibraltarlike Defenses.
While the intricacies of the modern fortifications of Malta are closely guarded secrets, its general defensive strength long has been recognized.

The old castles and fortresses were reported reinforced; and secret anchorages and submarine bases set up in outlying inlets. Like Gibraltar, Malta has innumerable coast and anti-aircraft batteries, bomb-proof shelters and rock-tunneled galleries where men, munitions, food, and water supplies may be stored. Beneath the island's surface, a network of ancient underground passages and catacombs also is reported now put into service as part of the defense and fortifications system.

Although its status as a vital British base carries the wartime penalty of enemy attack, Malta, in peace, enjoys the economic advantages of heavy payrolls there for workers and members of the armed forces.

The islands (which must support a population of nearly 270,000 people) are themselves far from self-sufficient—even in normal times. Intensive cultivation of the thin but fertile soil provides crops of grain, vegetables, and fruits, but the supply is inadequate to meet domestic needs. In one recent prewar year, Malta imported nearly $20,000,000 worth of goods, compared with exports which amounted to less than a million and a quarter dollars.

"As a result of the war, a number of women and children were evacuated from Malta. Many of its young men are serving with the British forces."

In many instances where galvanizing has been the standard finish, zinc is being conserved by using paint, porcelain enamel, synthetic enamel, and black japan as the finish. As a base material in a few quartermaster procurements, zinc is being replaced by galvanized iron or steel.

As a substitute for nickel plating, paint or synthetic enamel is being widely used and bronze or porcelain finishes are being used in place of monel metal, which contains much nickel.

Enough Vitamins For All in U. S. Just Eat the Right Food And You Have Them.

MINNEAPOLIS. — The United States, unlike Europe and Japan, is richly supplied with all the vitamins necessary for health, vigor and morale; Americans need only eat the right foods in order to get them.

Japan, after an 18-year campaign for self-sufficiency in food production, is still a desperately undernourished nation. German research has been driven to the limit to improve "ersatz" foods and to find new sources of necessary vitamins. Britain is importing vitamin concentrates and vitamin-rich foods from the United States. Reports filtering out of the occupied countries indicate that deficiency diseases there are already widespread.

But in the United States, vitamin-bearing foods are abundant and many are still cheap, a study by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company says. Americans can practically eliminate danger of vitamin deficiencies merely by eating enough of the simpler foods, and by getting enough sunshine.

Milk, and whole-wheat or other whole-grain breads and cereals, contain between them practically the entire list of needed vitamins and minerals, and in ample quantities except in the cases of vitamins A, C, G, and D. Inexpensive green and yellow vegetables furnish the extra A, C, and G. Sunshine will furnish the D, except in the case of growing children, who need a little extra in the form of fish liver oils or other D concentrates.

Prevent Eye Trouble Epidemics.
The expansion of our already vast dairy production is being pushed so as to take care of our armed forces, build reserve stocks for army and navy bases, and meet lease-lend requirements, without too great a reduction in the domestic supply. We have an enormous reserve of wheat in storage. Now available to the many who prefer white flour is the new "enriched" kind, which approximates many of the values of whole wheat or graham flour.

There has been some worry over the growing scarcity of vitamin A concentrates. Chief source is cod liver oil, and trade with Norway, our major source of supply, was cut off early in the present war. Butter is another important source of vitamin A; Denmark exported practically all her dairy products during the last World war and suffered epidemics of eye troubles and blindness as a result. Germany's "guns-before-butter" policy resulted in similar epidemics there during the years of preparation for the present conflict.

However, two carrots will deliver a whole day's supply of vitamin A for one person. So will half a cup of cooked kale, turnip tops, spinach or other greens. A small serving of liver (beef, pork, lamb, or poultry liver) deposits enough A to last two or three days. Apricots and peaches, canned or fresh, are rich sources. So are cantaloupes.

Potato and Citrus Crops.
The German potato crop is the backbone of that nation's food supply; the Nazis have also caused the planting of great stretches of wild rose bushes along their railroad rights-of-way, not for spiritual beauty, but because the wild rose hips—the seed part of the plant—have been found to be a rich source of C concentrate.

In this country we have enormous citrus crops and vast production of other fruits and vegetables. The daily grapefruit, orange or tomato juice is the most enjoyable source.

German Admirals Still
Hoping for Big Sea
Battle... Will Morale
Of Japs Hold? ...
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Most surprising report from Germany in many months is that the Nazis are feverishly building battleships. Coming at the time when most of the defenders of the big war wagons are downcast as a result of the disasters to big ships from air attack in Pearl Harbor, off Malaya, etc., this puts heart in some of the old admirals who still insist that "when everything else is destroyed, the hulk of the battleship will still be there, and still able to fire some of its guns."

Assuming the report to be correct, and there is no earthly reason to question its honesty, it shows that the German admirals are still hoping for a big sea battle, which, if successful, would mean the crushing of Britain beyond any possibility of relief from any other part of the world.

This hope was very strong in the early part of the war, as pointed out at the time in these dispatches. What the German admirals hoped was to whittle down the British navy to a size which would give the Nazi a reasonable chance for success in the event of a major sea battle.

They have always been sure that they could fight better, and particularly that they could shoot better, than the British. This is based not merely on their conceit as a super-race—for some reason the German naval officer has never had as much of this conviction of racial and class superiority as the German army officer—but on better optical glass. This means, they believe, better aiming.

But the whittling down process did not proceed rapidly enough. The British navy has taken some hard blows, but so has the Nazi fleet.

The spectacular cruise of the Bismarck encouraged the German admirals more than ever, though the loss of the ship postponed Der (Naval) Tag. The fact that she hurt the Prince of Wales seriously enough to delay her speed, and that she sank the Hood without difficulty, and that it took so much trouble for the British to sink her even after they had crippled the Bismarck's own steering gear, proved their every contention.

Very Bad Trade

Evidently the shooting of the Bismarck in her engagements with the Prince of Wales and the Hood was superb, even admitting that the explosion of the Hood's magazines was a lucky shot. But the Prince of Wales could be and was repaired (only to be sunk by the Japanese later). Whereas the sinking of the Hood at the expense of the Bismarck was a very bad trade for the Germans, the Hood being an old battle cruiser, a type which did not show up well in the First World war.

So the news that there may be a whole fleet of Bismarcks (the Tirpitz is the only one completed) may turn out to be very serious indeed if the war continues long enough. Applied to the Pacific situation it becomes serious in that it will tend to hold all British naval strength possible in Europe. Which would mean that handling the Japanese, as well as keeping the line of communication across the Atlantic, will become a U. S. navy job.

The extraordinary capacity of Germany to produce armament continues the wonder of the ages. Imagine her being able to supply big naval guns for the new ships in addition to supplying her army.

However, German efficiency never takes into consideration certain human factors. The Graf Spee ought to have sunk the three little British ships that attacked her, instead of being smashed into uselessness herself. And maybe the Japanese fleet will not be so important by the time the new German fleet is ready.

Can Japanese Really Take It?

One thing that nobody is qualified to talk about is Japanese morale. It is something we simply know nothing about. But it is a very interesting object of speculation.

We do know something that has been proved many times, in various ways. We are very much like the British in that we seldom do things efficiently in a war. We make horrible blunders, but we always muddle through.

Now, as we keep fighting the Japanese, perhaps rather ineffectively, but nevertheless annoyingly, will there come a day when the people of that country, or even its rulers, begin to wonder whether all this is worth while? Certainly the economic profit from looting the Dutch Indies will not be satisfactory as long as they are losing ships and cargoes to submarine and airplane and raider attacks.

We are assuming for the moment that there will be no great naval battle in the Far East for a long time. If there is, and we are victorious, that would hasten peace. If we should lose, it would merely delay it, though perhaps for years.

Kidnaping Cases Prompt Three to Take Their Lives

Follows Well-Established
Pattern of Crime and
Its Consequences.

NEW YORK.—When Abe Reles, chief prosecution witness against New York's deadly Murder, Inc., plunged to his death from a Coney Island hotel window recently, he followed a well-established pattern of crime and consequences.

It is the experience of prosecuting officials throughout the United States that nearly every major criminal investigation and trial results in tragedy for some witness, or other incidental figure.

Often these victims of crime's far-spreading ripples are wholly innocent of any wrongdoing themselves.

Women victims or witnesses in three of America's most famous kidnaping cases have inexplicably committed suicide.

Why do perfectly "innocent bystanders" in so many famous criminal cases take their own lives?

Psychiatrists attribute it largely to the nerve-shattering effect of a prolonged trial upon all participants.

Strange McElroy Case.

Vicarious sufferings of this type—which the psychiatrists call "substitution of personality"—was almost certainly responsible for the strange and pathetic sequel to the kidnaping of attractive Mary McElroy, 25-year-old daughter of Henry F. McElroy, former city manager of Kansas City, Mo.

Mary was driven to an isolated cottage in Merriam, Kan., and chained to a wall in a filthy cellar. Twenty-nine hours later, on payment of $30,000 by her father, the girl was freed.

Expected to show bitterness against her kidnapers, she defended them. Obviously, her father said, the experience had disturbed the victim's mind, although in body she was uninjured.

Despite Mary's pleas, Walter McGee was sentenced to die. His brother, George, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Clarence Click, an accomplice, got eight years.

For six years Mary worked to have the McGee brothers' sentences softened or a double pardon issued. She corresponded with them as often as prison rules permitted.

Mary's father died two years ago, the day before the grand jury was to examine him concerning income tax payments.

Three months later, in January, 1940, Mary killed herself with a pistol in the bathroom whence she had been kidnaped.

Father Kills Self.

A father followed his daughter in death after the Carroll-Matthiesen killing, three years ago. Donald Carroll Jr., 16, shot his sweetheart, Charlotte Matthiesen, 18, because she was about to become a mother. Fred Matthiesen, war veteran father of the girl, forgave the youth, then murmured:

"This may be the end of me, too. I have only the heaviness of life left."

He defended Donald at the trial and so did the slain girl's mother. The boy was acquitted on the ground that he had been insane when he fired the shot. Eight days after acquittal, he was discharged as sane.

Anxious to avoid further notoriety, Charlotte's parents moved to Creskill, N. J., where, a year later, the forgiving father ended his life by inhaling the exhaust from his automobile.

PHILADELPHIA.—Eighty-one-year-old William Ruhl effected settlement of a property sale in Camden; then, pocketing the $901 cash sale price, started back for his home in Philadelphia. Just before boarding his bus, however, he slapped a pocket to be sure the money was there—and found it wasn't.

Weeping, he made his way to the police clerk's office and sobbed out his story. All the police were sympathetic. They asked him to make one more thorough search of his pockets. And there was the money, inside his vest.

Splits His Home in Two

And Moves It 153 Miles

MCALISTER, OKLA.—It has long been a custom to pick up one's bed and walk but L. D. Lackey has put that old adage to shame. He moved his six-room house 153 miles. When Lackey, a rural mail carrier, was transferred from Wardville to Okemah, he had his home split into two sections and trucks did the rest. He estimates he saved about $2,700 on the cost of erecting a duplicate house at the new location.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

The potato ricer can be used to wring out hot cloths and save many burned fingers.

In planning meals, bacon should be considered as fat rather than meat, because it contains very little protein.

Stainless steel utensils have to be heated slowly over a low flame or the foods being cooked in them will scorch.

A pinch of salt added to very sour fruits while cooking will greatly reduce the quantity of sugar needed to sweeten them.

When steaming pudding always have the water boiling. It should come up to at least two inches from the top of the mold. Replenish with boiling water to prevent the pudding from falling.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer aching backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT ELEVEN
THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, comes with Colt to Honolulu and meets Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance. Dick's uncle, James Wayne, manager of this island, Alakoa, dies from overwork and Dick attempts to work out a compromise settlement of Karen's claim. This is refused. Meantime Karen has learned that both Colt and Dick are in love with her. On the island, one day, Dick reveals that Karen is not an heiress at all, but that Garrett Waterson is alive and is on his way to Alakoa. He and Karen discuss what attitude the old man may take toward her claim to the island. Now continue with the story.

"I've been perfectly sincere. Dick, you just have to believe that!"
"I do. But Garrett Waterson may very possibly believe, by this time, that the Waynes took unfair advantage of him when they bought Alakoa."

Karen seemed strangely shaken. "Then nothing is settled at all, is it?"

"Nothing. They key has passed into other hands—that's all."

"And this fight has to go on, and on—"

"Are you tired of this fight, Karen?"

"Something's changed it for me. I don't know what it is. At first it seemed such a glorious adventure; it promised to open up a whole new world. But that's all gone. I don't know what's the matter. Somehow I'm not sure, any more, that I want Alakoa."

"Neither," said Dick Wayne, "do I. You know that."

She turned a little to look at him; and the young stars made her face a pale oval, mysterious and lovely, but her expression he could not see. "You don't want your island?" she asked queerly.

He took her hands, and made her turn toward him. "You know what I want. You've known it all the time."

"But—the island—your brothers—"

"Haven't you?" he asked.
"There isn't—there isn't any way—"

"Haven't you?" Dick insisted.

The resistance seemed to go out of her; she swayed forward, and rested her cheek against his chest. "Yes," she admitted; "I know."

"There isn't any time to lose," Dick said. "I've had a radio from Waterson. He'll drop anchor in less than two hours. By that time it will be too late."

"What are we going to do?"

"We're going to run out on this show. We'll be married in Hilo. I don't care what happens after that. They can go on with this infernal squabble until they eat each other's last shirt."

"It's impossible! I can't!"

"Why? If you're still going to let John Colt—"

"Don't you see what position I'm put in? Do you think I've so little pride that I'd try to seize your island, and fail, and then edge in by marrying the very man I tried to bankrupt?"

"I don't believe you care any more about the island than I do."

"You don't now. But some day you'd remember, and perhaps begin to doubt; and nothing could ever be—"

"But you don't know that you've lost the island. Nobody will know until Garrett Waterson shows his hand."

"Dick—if my grandfather takes the island, I'll marry you then, if you want me to."

"No," he said. He released his hold, and she moved a few inches away from him. "No," he repeated. "I'm not going to marry an island either, Karen."

"Then you see—it's hopeless, Dick."

"In another hour or so it will be—completely. This is the last time we'll ever have any choice. Because now we don't know. Right now one of us is as good as broke—but we don't know which. Perhaps neither one of us will ever have anything in the world again."

"Maybe," Karen said, "that would be best of all. Only—we can't make that choice either, Dick. Neither one of us has any choice whatever, in anything, it seems."

Dick said gravely, "The choice is yours, Karen; and you have to make it now, tonight—before I leave this boat."

"What is it you want me to do?"

"I want you to come with me, now, on the Holokai. I'll throw the Holokai over the bar, and run to sea."

"If only," Karen said, "I had a little time—"

"Time? Good Lord, Karen!"

"Even a few hours—"

He saw that she was frightened; and he was pleased, because it told him that she wanted to come with him.

"You have a few hours," he said; "you have days, if you want. I'll stay at sea as long as you want me to. Or, when we've talked it over, I'll put back. Or I'll take you any place you want to go. But now we've got to get out of here—quickly—if there's ever going to be any hope at all."

She turned away from him and her hands gripped the rail hard; her eyes were on the Holokai, a dark tall shape, with her trucks showing against the stars. The moments ticked by, and the outrigger glided past twice, standing on and off, and it seemed to Dick that she was never going to speak. He picked Karen up lightly and lowered her over the rail into the moving outrigger; then himself vaulted the rail in time to light upon the canoe's stern as it swept past. The little craft reeled, and the canoe's whole outrigger lifted out of the water; then she steadied, and her sail flapped lazily as she came about and pointed for the Holokai.

"But you don't know that you've lost the island."

Karen stood beside Dick Wayne as he piloted the Holokai to sea. He was handling the wheel himself, as he always did in these reefs; but even while he was narrowly back-sighting his markers, the sense of her presence there had hold of every part of him, changing the meaning of the vessel, and the harbor, and the night. The salt spray that he loved had never, in all his life, been so welcome in the air he breathed.

The Chinese mess boy poked himself into the wheelhouse and plucked at Dick's sleeve. He was in a white mess jacket, this time.

"Captain Tonga, something is w'ong, I think. Somebody is in your cabin, I think. You send somebody in cabin?"

"Well, who in it?"

"Captain Torga, the door is fastened."

"Oh, bunk! What's the matter with you. Seeing akua?"

"No, Captain. Somebody is—"

"Go tell the cook to make dinner for two—and make it good. Get out of here and do as I tell you."

The big combers that lashed over the snag-toothed coral were close on the Holokai's bows, but Dick seemed sure of his way. He fired the Holokai at the channel like a shot; the big Diesel had small range of speed, so that under power the Holokai went full out or not at all. He spoke from the side of his mouth to the Japanese who served as first officer, bosun, and copper-smith.

"Inyashi, get the night glasses out of my bunk."

"Yes, Captain."

"We'll very likely sight the Sarah coming in—that's your grandfather's other ship," Dick said to Karen, raising his voice over the roar of the shoals. "She's a good little vessel, but much slower than this. She must have started north no more than twelve hours after the Holokai, and you see how late she is. Did you know that 'Sarah' was your grandmother's name?"

The Japanese quartermaster was back, bursting into the wheelhouse in the quick nervous way that marked everything he did. "Captain Dick, I cannot get the night glasses—you have left your cabin locked."

"Locked? You're crazy—the door's stuck, that's all. Give it a boot."

Inyashi showed extreme embarrassment. "Captain Dick, I did the panel split. I think it was poor wood, but I can fix it. It is locked—it is locked, I know."

"Let it go. I'll send up the glasses. Get a Kanaka boy for the wheel—we'll be in clear water in a minute. Set a course for Kalae; watch for a ship—any ship—and report all vessels to me."

"Yes, Captain!"

"That last is for you," Dick told Karen. The wheel was kicking crazily, but he let go with one hand, and pulled her close against him. "I thought you might want to see the ship that's bringing him in, out of the south."

"Out of the south," Karen repeated; "out of the sea, out of the past itself—"

"You'll like him, Karen; I promise you that."

"You and I have so much to talk about," Karen said. "I'm terribly eager to know more about my grandfather. I want to know where he's been, and what he does, and how he lives. I want to know what he's really like, and if you think he'll approve of me."

"And," Dick said, "why he disappeared, and hid his name?"

"Did he run from something, Dick?"

"Only from his own pride. I understand it; I understand it well."

But it's a little hard to explain to quiet people, leading quiet lives."

"Hard to explain?" she repeated.

"No, not to me! Even from what little I know of him, I do understand. As if it had been myself!"

He marveled a little at that. This utterly feminine girl, with her finely chiseled face and gentle small voice, could show flashes of something strangely reminiscent of Garrett Waterson; as if the mountainous and craggy fires of the old adventurer had perpetuated themselves in a thread of fine steel.

"I can tell you most of the rest," he said. "I—"

Dick suddenly spun the wheel hard over, and the Holokai yawed as the reef-rollers struck her in the bottle-neck of the entrance; then she steadied upon the easy swell of the open sea.

Inyashi stepped forward, and Dick turned over the wheel. "We can go below now, Karen. I don't think a whisky soda would do us any harm, do you? I have some of the same Scotch the British embassies use. And something to eat?"

Below, he moved briskly about the cabin, switching on more lights. "This door back here in the stern is to my own cabin—pretty small, but the only one there is. It's yours while you want it; I can sleep on the settee. But—"

It suddenly occurred to him that this was the first moment in which they had been alone since he had persuaded her to leave the Seal. He turned and faced her, his eyes gay. A hundred voyages among the islands of little known seas had brought him less adventure than he believed belonged to him tonight.

For a moment she met his eyes and her smile was shy, misty; he had never seen her in this mood before, with her defenses lowered and the keen brilliance of her glance shadowed and softened. "But—but—" He forgot what he had meant to say.

"But what?" she mocked him. "If you mean to suggest—"

She stopped. Abruptly the smile left her face, and the softness, to be replaced by astonishment.

After his first split second of surprise he saw that she was looking past him, and he whirled.

The door of the inner cabin had opened, and Lilua was standing there—Lilua, with half-clad body and blazing eyes.

She stood very straight, swaying with effortless balance to the lift and tilt of the sea as only the Polynesians can. She was wearing nothing but a wrapped skirt of tapa cloth—not even a lei, or a blossom in her hair to account for the odor of ginger flowers that came subtly into the cabin from the doorway where she stood.

She spoke straight to Karen; it was as if she could not see Dick at all.

"What are you doing here?"

There was appalling silence, filled with the rush of the sea along the ports. "Lilua, this is ridiculous—it's fantastic!"

"You stay out of this, Dick! It isn't your fault—it's this woman. You can't understand her because you're a man, but I understand her. What she can't steal she'll destroy. She'll eat the soul out of your body, Dick—and then go back to John Colt!"

"Be still!" Dick roared.

"I'll not be still! . . . Send her back to her own man. She has no right here. This is not her place."

Lilua was speaking to Karen, ignoring him again. Her voice was quiet, in comparison to his; yet somehow it cut his down, so that he stopped.

"This is my man. You know that. Why don't you go back to your own? Do you have to have everything—the land, and the sea, and the fish, and all the men in the world?"

For a moment a terrible exasperation half blinded Dick Wayne. Something that was worth more to him than the breath in his teeth had been altogether his, until Lilua appeared. She had come abruptly out of no place—unaccountable in her physical presence, but even more unaccountable as a factor in his life. Search his memory as he might, he could not recall ever having summoned her—not by so much as the trailing of his eyes.

THE HEALING MINISTRY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—2:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus . . . was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.—Matthew 14:14.

Man is more than a body. He is made up of body, soul, and spirit. In a physical world where he is so much in touch with physical nature, and the needs of his body are so much before him, he is prone to forget that there is within a spiritual nature which is his real self.

God is interested in both the physical and the spiritual side of man. He provides all that we need for our bodies, and above all, He meets the all-important spiritual hunger of man's inner being. We find the Lord Jesus in our lesson graciously touching both spirit and body of the palsied man in response to the faith of his friends.

I. Faith Brings a Double Need to Christ (vv. 1-4).

This faith-stimulating story faces us first with

1. An Impossible Situation. Incurably afflicted and helpless physically and far more deeply afflicted spiritually, this man had no one who could heal his body and restore his soul. Apart from the power of God in Jesus Christ his situation was hopeless, and thus he may well typify every one of us except for the grace of Christ.

Furthermore, his circumstances were such as to make it impossible for him to get to Jesus, who was there in his city. Even when his four friends came to his help and bore him to the house where Jesus was, they could not enter because of the crowds. So a journey begun in hope was evidently to close in despair. But wait, these men had

2. An Undeniable Faith. "Where there's a will there's a way." Where there is faith the obstacles may be surmounted. Having begun a good work they persevered in it.

Had these men been bound by convention or custom they would never have put their friend at Jesus' feet. They did try to make a proper entry through the door, but it was blocked. The way to Jesus is often closed, by some custom, a vain philosophy, or a religious ceremony. Let us, like these believing men, open the roof if necessary to bring our needs and our needy friends to Him.

Although mention is made only of the palsy of this man, it is probable that both he and they knew that his need was for a double cure, for he was yet in his sins.

They brought him to Jesus, where their

II. Faith Receives a Double Reward From Christ (vv. 5-12).

Immediately Jesus "saw their faith" (v. 5), just as He always does. God is on the lookout for faith and is quick to reward it. The twofold need here brought a double blessing.

1. Spiritual Cleansing. The man's physical affliction thus proved to be his greatest blessing, for it brought him to Jesus, who cleansed him of all unrighteousness. If he had not been palsied he might never have met the Lord. Suffering, then, may be a means of grace. That is more than a pious platitude, for it has been proved repeatedly in the existence of men and women.

Certain scribes "sitting there" (they were not doing a thing to help) began to reason in their hearts that Jesus was blaspheming because only God can forgive sin. Their theology was faultless and their reasoning was logical, but the premise of their argument was wrong. Only God can forgive sin, but Jesus is God, something which they in their wisdom did not realize or accept.

We (especially young people in school) should be careful that the fluent smoothness of some unbelieving philosopher's logic does not lead us astray, and away from God's truth.

Note also the solemnizing thought that Jesus knew what they were thinking in their hearts. Let us remember that "all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do" (Heb. 4:13). What does He see when He looks into our hearts?

The challenge of these questioning scribes is met by

2. Physical Healing. Forgiving sins was harder than healing the body, but these enemies of Jesus lived so much in the realm of the physical that He had to give them a demonstration of His almighty power which they could see. It was a gracious thing for Him to do, and perhaps necessary in those early days of His life and ministry.

Today, with all the light of history upon the work of God, we need to beware that we do not sit in the seat of the scornful and demand a physical sign before we will believe. God is doing great things in the spiritual realm even in our day, in which Christian men and women may share by faith.

TINLEY PARK School News
Pupils of the eighth grade are attempting to do their part in the National Defense program.

At a Valentine party held in the school Friday, the children drew ten names of their classmates and instead of sending a Valentine, a penny was put in an envelope. Thus each child received at least ten pennies. With these the child then purchased a defense stamp. However, this did not end the participation in helping our armed forces. Every child brought either a cake or cookies which were turned over to the Service Men's Club in Chicago. This organization entertains many of our soldiers and sailors over each week end. Entertainment and food is free to the service men. Instead of the usual refreshments of a party the children satisfied themselves with mint heart candy.

A Trained Army...on Active Duty

• Your friends in the telephone company are doing the biggest job they ever had to do... a job directly linked with winning this war.

To the successful conclusion of this job the 30,000 men and women in the Illinois Bell Telephone Company have been pledged ever since we were attacked. Right now they are handling millions more calls each week than at the same time last year. They are meeting other unusual demands for service and equipment.

Many calls are essential to the successful conduct of the war—the movement of men, munitions and material—the direction of war production. These things come first and we consider it our solemn duty to serve them first.

We are doing our utmost to maintain the same high standard of service to which you are accustomed. We believe you'll agree we can still say, "So far, so good."

AUTOMATIC
REFRIGERATOR

• In these days, when all of us are doing our best to build up savings, it pays to review every-day expenditures—amounts we have regarded as "fixed", such as food budgets and other kitchen expenses. Maybe we'll find that some of the money we are now paying out can be converted to savings without lowering our standard of living.

Here are 7 proved ways of saving money on your automatic refrigerator. Put them into operation in your house today...you'll soon feel the effect of the savings!

FREE—Write or inquire at your Public Service Store for the useful booklet, "How to Get the Most from Your Electric Service". Gives valuable tips, costs you nothing.

1 Be sure your refrigerator is not set flush against the wall—it costs more to run it that way. There should be an air space.

2 Take advantage of the savings which result from quantity buying of groceries. You can save $3.00 to $4.00 per month in this way alone. Your refrigerator will keep the food fresh.

3 When you plan a meal, plan how to use the leftovers. You can keep them safely in your automatic refrigerator.

4 Don't place food directly against the freezing compartment—this obstructs the circulation of cool air throughout the refrigerator.

5 Count the number of times a day you open the refrigerator door—divide it by two, and stick with it! You'll pay less to operate it.

6 Defrost regularly, according to your instruction book.

7 If something goes wrong, call in a service man at once, while the trouble is slight. Delay may cost you a high service bill.

Students Prayer

Invocation of R. E. Younggren of Kewanee, a Student at the University of Illinois, at a Student Convocation.

Kind Heavenly Father, out of our confusion and bewilderment, and in humble recognition of our human weaknesses, we turn to Thee.

We ask Thee to strengthen and preserve in us an undying faith in Thee, and in the ultimate good in all men—everywhere; a faith that when this holocaust is done, we may build anew a world in which men are free to work and play, speak and sing and worship.

We ask that we may have the strength—physical and spiritual—to conduct ourselves as rational men and women: calm, deliberate, and determined: that we may face our task with the sobriety becoming of the human dignity in which we believe.

We ask that our energies may be preserved and our consciousness and spirit may be uncrushed by all that lies before us, so that when the final victory has been won, and the firing has ceased, we will not selfishly withdraw ourselves to our long hoped for comfort, but will as willingly take up the struggle for a just and lasting peace as we now willingly take up the prosecution of a cause we pray is just. Amen.

Americanism Week

To arouse the spirit of true Americanism in the highest degree, and unite the defense efforts and facilities of every citizen and organization in Illinois, the period between February 12, the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln and February 22, the birthday anniversary of Geo. Washington, inclusive, has been proclaimed as "Americanism Week." The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce is furthering observance of this period throughout the nation.

Gov. Dwight H. Green has accepted the chairmanship of a statewide committee in Illinois to formulate and carry out an elaborate program of observance of "Americanism Week," which will give opportunity for all to participate.

Following are the suggestions already made for this program, suggestions which can be carried out in every community.

Every clergyman to deliver a sermon, preferably Sunday, February 15, emphasizing Americanism, patriotism and worthy citizenship as necessary to the victory which will preserve Christianity and godliness throughout the world.

Every organization, patriotic, civic and social, to devote some period during "Americanism Week" to a program which will stress the deep purpose of the period which has been set aside.

Radio broadcasts whenever possible, both over national chains and local stations, to urge participation in the observance.

Community mass meetings to be held at some time during the period for which speakers will be selected who can sound the note of Americanism.

All labor organizations, both state and local, to set aside one day during the period as Americanism Day for full observance of the patriotic purpose.

The American Legion, in addition to its pilgrimage to Lincoln's Tomb, to make every effort for local observances of the Americanism period, by every local post.

Other veterans' organizations to be requested to enlist all their members in some definite activity.

Boy Scout, Girl scout and similar organizations to conduct programs. Everyone who knows a boy in service, write a letter that week to the boy.

This Valentine Cake Goes Straight to Your Heart!
(See Recipes Below)

Cupid's Day

Hearts are king for a day and with these magic little symbols you can do up some magic tricks that will make small entertaining a triumph. You can have a party if you like in the Valentine theme, or you can work in the decorations of hearts, Cupids, red-and-white or pink-and-white color schemes in just serving refreshments.

The idea is to be festive and just gay enough to put you and your family in a good mood. So plan to be on speaking terms with Valentine's day with the star selections I'm including in today's recipes.

If you're really planning a party, any number of ideas offer themselves as a gracious part of the entertainment. For instance, if you're far enough north to have ice, an ice carnival is fun. A masquerade in which the guests come dressed as some of Cupid's famous victims goes over well. A card party featuring games such as "Hearts" or "Old Maid" might answer your needs, or perhaps a dance with heart and cupid decorations in crepe paper.

*St. Valentine's Day Cake.

3 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1½ cups sugar
1 cup milk
½ teaspoons lemon extract
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add lemon extract. Fold in egg whites quickly and thoroughly. Bake in heart-shaped pan, 9 by 9 by 3¼ inches in a moderate (350-degree) oven 65 minutes or until done. Spread rose-tinted Seven Minute frosting on top of cake. Sprinkle moist sweetened coconut on sides of cake while frosting is still soft. Decorate top with cardboard arrow and a heart of coconut.

Seven Minute Frosting.

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons water
1½ teaspoons light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
Rose vegetable coloring

Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary beater and cook seven minutes or until frosting stands in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Tint with vegetable coloring.

*Valentine's Day Salad.

(Serves 6)
Pimiento
1½ teaspoons gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water

Lynn Says:

Valentine ideas are practical for the celebration of anniversaries even after St. Valentine's day is past.

Recently I saw an anniversary celebration at which a cranberry mold was used. Cranberry jelly cut in heart shapes was placed around the big mold. The number of small hearts corresponded to the number of years the couple had been married.

The heart-shaped cakes and molds of ice cream are much in use for anniversary celebrations and carry out the idea effectively. Heart-shaped candies may also be used to decorate whipped cream or desserts.

*St. Valentine's Day Cake
*Recipes Given.

1½ cups cottage cheese
½ cup finely chopped celery
Salt and pepper
Dash of cayenne pepper
Lettuce and other greens

Place a border of thin strips of pimiento around the bottom of heart-shaped molds. Place small hearts cut from pimiento in center. Dissolve gelatin in cold water and finish dissolving over hot water. Add cottage cheese, mix well, then celery and seasonings. Fill molds, chill, and when firm unmold on lettuce.

Extra special describes some dishes perfectly, and such is my verdict for this chicken loaf:

*Chicken Loaf With Mushroom Sauce.

(Serves 10 to 12)
1 4-pound chicken, stewed, meat diced
1½ cups chicken broth
1 cup milk
3 eggs
Salt and pepper
½ cup bread crumbs
Pimiento
1 cup rice

Cook rice in boiling salted water until done. Do not rinse. Beat egg yolks slightly, add to rice. Then add chicken, bread crumbs, chicken broth, milk, stiffly beaten egg whites and seasonings. Butter a loaf pan and dredge with extra bread crumbs. Lay strips of pimiento all along bottom of pan diagonally. Add chicken mixture. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 1½ hours in a pan of hot water. Allow to stand ½ hour in pan after taking from oven before attempting to unmold.

For mushroom sauce, canned mushroom soup may be used. Flavor with the juice of a half lemon and a dash of nutmeg. If you desire to make a mushroom sauce, make 2 cups of medium white sauce, add 1 cup sautéed, chopped, canned or fresh cooked mushrooms. Season this with lemon juice and nutmeg.

Meringues, crisp and chewy, are unexcelled for desserts when main courses are on the hearty side. They lend themselves to all types of decorations and in this instance, you can serve them filled with strawberry ice cream or one of the red ices.

*Meringues.

(Makes 10 shells)
6 egg whites
¾ cup granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vinegar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Add salt and vinegar to egg whites, then beat until foamy. Add vanilla, then add sugar, two tablespoonfuls at a time, beating steadily all the while until whites are very stiff. Spoon onto ungreased sheet and hollow out centers. Bake in a slow oven (250-degree) on an ungreased cookie sheet for 1 hour. Cool.

*Heart-Shaped Sandwiches.

Use whichever kind of bread you prefer, and cut into heart shapes with a large heart cutter. Butter and fill with desired filling.

Two choice fillings which carry out the Valentine theme are these: Ham put through the grinder or chopped fine and mixed with finely chopped celery and pickle, moistened with mayonnaise. Jellies or jams in red blended with cream cheese are also attractive.

AUTO RATIONING

Q.—Why do you want a new car?
A.—It's the only way I can get five new tires.

Q.—Are you aware of the restrictions?

A.—No, but I knew something was all wrong. I called up several auto salesrooms yesterday and in no case did a salesman show up at my home inside of five minutes.

Q.—You already have a car?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What's wrong with it?

A.—Nothing.

Q.—Then why do you wish a new model?

A.—My wife thinks our next-door neighbor's car looks better.

Q.—The kind of car your neighbors have is of no importance.

A.—That's what YOU think!

Q.—Only certain classes of people are eligible for new cars. Are you a doctor?

A.—No, but my feet are just as tender.

Q.—Are you a farm veterinarian?

A.—Is this a car rationing bureau or an Information Please program?

Q.—Are you engaged in fire fighting?

A.—No; that's just an impression some people get from the way I drive.

Q.—Are you engaged in crime prevention?

A.—No, but if you'll let me have a new auto I'll give any cop a lift from now on.

Q.—Are you engaged in law enforcement?

A.—Yes. I'm a lawyer.

Q.—I said "enforcement," not "evasion."

A.—I didn't come here to be insulted.

Q.—That's all right; we don't mind doing it. Listen, do you regard a new car as a necessity?

A.—Positively.

Q.—Give three reasons.

A.—Well, first of all, I live four blocks from my office, and without a car I would have to negotiate the entire distance on foot. Second, we use the car to go to church.

Q.—How far is the church?

A.—It's almost an eighth of a mile!

Q.—What's your third reason for regarding a car as indispensable?

A.—My third reason is the most important of all.

Q.—What is it?

A.—If I didn't have an automobile where would I store all those outdated road maps and useless tools?

RIMES ON PUBLIC DUTY

Folks who buy
Defense stamps gladly
Speed the day
Our foes run madly.

Those who buy
Bonds make more certain
Hitler'll get
An early curtain.

Ed Pearson, who has evidently been flat hunting, says he can't understand why the ads don't group apartments under three headings: furnished, unfurnished and underfurnished.

The United States department of agriculture is working on a motor fuel made from corn and potatoes. Juliet Colt says it is going to seem funny to ask the station attendant for six bushels of high test.

CANDIDATES FOR THE FIRING SQUAD

A guy on whom I'd pour hot gravy is always asking, "Where's our navy?"

CAN YOU REMEMBER—

Away back when a post-office clerk sold nothing but postage stamps at the stamp window?

Ima Dodo bought one of those U. S. auto tax stamps today and she says she is going to buy one every day and save them until maturity.

Canned beer may be discontinued due to the need for tin. It is okay with us. We never did like reaching into the icebox for a glass of beer and coming out with a can of tomatoes.

Moe Berg, Boston Red Sox ball player, has retired from the diamond to become a government good will ambassador to Pan America. This is most encouraging. We have long had a distinct impression that our team in that area was weak both in the field and at the bat.

Mr. Berg speaks nine languages. But the umpires were always able to defeat him in one.

We favor more baseball players in our diplomatic forces. You can't name one in twenty in our entire diplomatic service who has color, speed, punch or even a good throwing arm. We will never think an envoy is really good until we see some kids surround him and ask for an autograph.

Why ban those radio quiz programs? If the enemy gets as much wrong information from them as the American people do everything will be just ducky.

TODAY, Democracy is not hard to appreciate. We know it is not just a few hazy words written on parchment or an ideal that has outlived its usefulness, but rather, the greatest success story ever told. Today, Democracy is not an idea any longer, but a visible thing. Today, Democracy is America. "Imagine, letting people govern themselves." "Outrageous." "Fantastic." Well, maybe so— but it works.
